Abstract: Have you ever wondered how a person chooses to become a mathematician? How do they start getting interested in the subject, what draws them to it? What does a mathematician do and why? All these questions and more will be answered in our series about the Life of a Mathematician. In this talk, Dr. Lehman will discuss the experiences that brought him into mathematics. He will also describe in a very non-technical manner his interest in the subjects of number theory and elliptic curves.
